Another means of disseminating thought, as well as of developing the mental and manual faculties simultaneously, would be the introduction of type-setting in the public school as a weekly exercise, but as it is not the purpose of this article to discuss here the means and methods of industrial education, any further remarks on this head will be out of order.

It is merely intended to call attention to the fact that there is need of a more complete development of all the faculties used to convey or receive impressions and to coördinate them into a closer and more efficient system of instruction as a basis for the more intelligent expression of thought.
